

Chamber's Clark Talks Mask-Wearing on Fox Business

On Fox Business' Varney & Co. U.S. Chamber President Suzanne Clark discussed the need for national guidance on mask-wearing to fight the pandemic.

"At the moment we have a hodge-podge of local and state ordinances about masks, and employers aren't sure what to do," said Clark. "We need to get some national guidance on what the data says, what health experts say we need to do about mask-wearing so that we stop this hodge-podge and get to some public safety and consumer confidence levels that get the economy open again."

Clark emphasized that for economic recovery we must take steps to stop the spread of the virus, saying, "We want to shut down this virus and reopen the economy. And what public health experts say is the fastest way to do both is for all of us to wear a mask."

Last week, the U.S. Chamber, along with other business associations, sent a letter to the President, the Vice President, and the National Governors Association asking them to work together on national guidance on mask-wearing.
