

Infrastructure Investment to Drive Economic Recovery

Last Friday, Chamber CEO Tom Donohue talked to The Hill's Steve Clemon about the pandemic and what role infrastructure investment can play to drive economic recovery.

Big picture: “Before we do anything, we have to work on the pandemic,” Donohue said. On additional pandemic relief being discussed in Washington, he noted, “We think the aid should be timely, temporary, and targeted.”

Looking ahead: “We desperately need an infrastructure program” that includes roads, bridges, transit, and broadband, Donohue explained. “It will do three things: good jobs; increases in safety and declines in accidents; and a massive increase in productivity.”

Learn more:

- The Chamber, along with a coalition of national and local organizations, are part of the “Build by the Fourth of July” campaign, urging Congress to pass an infrastructure package by July 4, 2021.

Watch