

Path Forward: India's COVID-19 Crisis

The latest episode of the U.S. Chamber Foundation's Path Forward series examined the COVID-19 crisis facing India. The Chamber has been coordinating with the Biden administration and the private sector to help India in their time of need.

Why it matters: “We are reminded again that this is a global crisis, and the pandemic will not be over until it is defeated in every corner of the world,” said Chamber President and CEO Suzanne Clark.

Clark discussed India's situation with Indian Ambassador Taranjit Singh Sandhu.

Key takeaways:

- “Behind every number, every statistic, there's a human story,” said Ambassador Sandhu. “It's an extremely challenging situation. However, with support from friends and partners, like the United States, we will hopefully emerge from this soon.”
- “The most critical items relate to oxygen devices” like ventilators, he explained. “We also have critical requirements of the COVID-19-related drugs like Remdesivir.”

Take action:

- Resources for India's COVID-19 Crisis, developed by the Chamber Foundation, include a portal where companies can offer in-kind donations.

Watch

