Ms. Erica Dobbs
MIT Ph.D Candidate
in Political Science

Erica Dobbs is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Political Science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Her research primarily focuses on the relationship between economic change and migration, and how these new dynamics reshape local politics. She is particularly interested in these changes within the context of stateless nations. She has received research support from the U.S. Fulbright Program, the Center for International Studies at MIT, and the Minda de Gunzburg Center for European Studies, the David Rockefeller Center for Latin American Studies, and the Center for International Development at Harvard University. Erica received a Masters in Public Policy with a focus on International Trade and Finance from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard, and a BA in History with a focus on Latin America and the Caribbean from Howard University.
